

Names _____

Date _____

Directions

In some ways, a search engine is like a well-trained dog. It will fetch what you want, but only if you use the right commands. Although single words are better commands for dogs, more words are better for search engines.

Our question: _____Our search site: _____One keyword used in first search:

Number of results:

Are answers found in the first three results?  Yes  NoTwo keywords used in second search:

Number of results:

Are answers found in the first three results?  Yes  NoKeywords used in additional searches:

Number of results:

Are answers found in the first three results?  Yes  No

Question:

---

---

---

---

Answers:

---

---

---

---

How many searches did it take to find the answers?

---

How many keywords did it take to find the answers?

---

Two sites that had the answers I was looking for were:

---